Hellenikon Idyllion 32nd Summer School in Ancient Greek 06.07-27.07.2024

The Hellenikon Idyllion 32nd Summer School is an intensive seminar in spoken Ancient Greek, aimed at improving and deepening participants' linguistic skills in the language.

Course information:

The seminar will run for 3 weeks (Mon-Fri), with two 2 hr sessions a day (morning and afternoon). The sessions consist of reading and discussing an Ancient Greek text together, using Ancient Greek as the vehicular language. The discussions are orientated to the philological, linguistic, and historical aspects of the texts. The seminar will be led by Matthias Erbacher (student at Sorbonne Université, 1st week), Federico Aurora (University of Oslo, 2nd week) and Florian Feicht (Heinz-Berggruen-Gymnasium, Berlin, 3rd week).

The weekend is free, and participants often use it to visit sites and towns (ancient and modern) nearby, including Patras and Corinth, or to see a play at the ancient theatre festival in Epidaurus, or in the closer venues of Patras and Aigion.

Participation:

The seminar is aimed at students and teachers, but open to anyone with some previous knowledge of Ancient Greek. It is not necessary to have spoken Ancient Greek previously to participate in the seminar.

Location:

The Hellenikon Idyllion is a cultural centre situated in the village of Selianitika on the northwest coast of the Peloponnese, between Patras and Aegion, and directly on Gulf of Corinth. The centre is located in a garden covered by grape pergolas and 10 meters from the beach.

Course Fee and Accommodation:

Course Fee: 25 € per week, no course fee for pupils from 06.07.-13.07.; Accommodation: 25€ per night (06.07.-13.07. for pupils: 10€ per night) in a shared room. Single and double rooms are also available to different rates. For prices and more details, please contact Andreas Dreki (see contact details below).
